approaches at a time that sees a new dynamic toward a devolved Wales including in the environmental policy field this afforded the opportunity to reflect on pressing environmental quandaries and to bring together contributors conceptual insights and technical legal know how in identifying ideas for potential responses and solutions these environmental problems with palpably global implications such as climate change thus require engagement at regional and local levels to look to the future a health care provider is likely to be the first professional contact for survivors of intimate partner violence or sexual assault evidence suggests that women who have been subjected to violence seek health care more often than non abused women even if they do not disclose the associated violence they also identify health care providers as the professionals they would most trust with disclosure of abuse these guidelines are an unprecedented effort to equip healthcare providers with evidence based guidance as to how to respond to intimate partner violence and sexual violence against women they also provide advice for policy makers encouraging better coordination and funding of services and greater attention to responding to sexual violence and partner violence within training programmes for health care providers the guidelines are based on systematic reviews of the evidence and cover 1 identification and clinical care for intimate partner violence 2 clinical care for sexual assault 3 training relating to intimate partner violence and sexual assault against women 4 policy and programmatic approaches to delivering services 5 mandatory reporting of intimate partner violence the guidelines aim to raise awareness of violence against women among health care providers and policy makers so that they better understand the need for an appropriate health sector response they provide standards that can form the basis for national guidelines and for integrating these issues into health care provider education the covid 19 pandemic has caused unprecedented ripples throughout society bringing many sectors and fields including education to a virtual halt or forcing them to change their working style abruptly based on technological advancements e learning preparedness and human and financial resources higher education systems and universities in eastern and western countries have responded differently to this crisis comparative research on educational policy responses to the covid 19 pandemic eastern vs western perspectives presents global research on the response of higher education to the covid 19 pandemic from both the east and the west it sheds light on the relevant challenges strategies and effectiveness of the policies set in place in response to the pandemic covering topics such as international student related policies pedagogical adaptation and student motivation this premier reference source is an essential resource for policymakers government officials faculty of higher education students and educators of higher education libraries researchers and academicians the concept of wicked problems has become very commonly used and abused in contemporary studies of public policy while expressing some appropriate skepticism about the concept Brian Head uses the idea to analyse the numerous difficult problems facing governments in the 21st century by Guy Peters Maurice Falk professor of American Government University of Pittsburgh USA rich with empirical detail this book looks set to become the definitive work on wicked issues and what to do about them Claire A Dunlop professor of Politics University of Exeter UK this book provides a concise introduction to the concept and management of wicked problems the kind of poorly structured intractable policy problems with unknown solutions with which policy makers unfortunately must engage on a frequent basis Michael Howlett Burnaby Mountain professor and Canada Research Chair Simon Fraser University Canada this is an open access book this book offers the first overview of the wicked problems literature often seen as complex open ended and intractable with both the nature of the problem and the preferred solution being strongly contested it contextualises the debate using a wide range of relevant policy examples explaining why these issues attract so much attention there is an increasing interest in the conceptual and practical aspects of how wicked problems are identified understood and managed by policy practitioners the standard public management responses to complexity and uncertainty including traditional regulation and market based solutions are insufficient leaders often advocate and implement ideological quick fixes but integrative and inclusive responses are increasingly being utilised to recognise the multiple interests and complex causes of these problems this book uses examples from a wide range of social economic and environmental fields in order to develop new insights about better solutions and thus gain broad stakeholder acceptance for shared strategies for tackling wicked problems Brian Head is professor of public policy at the University of Queensland Australia he is the editor or co author of 12 books and over 100 academic articles on public management governance social issues and environmental policy policymakers have relied on a wide range of policy tools to cope with capital flow shocks and yet the effects and interaction of these policies remain under debate as does the motivation for using them in this paper quantile local projections are used to estimate the entire distribution of future policy responses to portfolio flow shocks for 20 emerging markets and understand the variety of policy choices across the sample to assuage endogeneity concerns estimates rely on the fact that global capital flows are exogenous from the viewpoint of any one of these countries the paper finds that i policy responses to capital flow shocks are heterogeneous across countries fat tailed extreme responses tend to be more elastic than typical responses and asymmetric extreme responses tend to be more elastic with respect to outflows than to inflows ii country characteristics are linked to policy choices with cross country differences in forex intervention relating to the size of balance sheet vulnerabilities and the depth of the forex market iii the use of targeted macroprudential policy and capital flows management measures can help free the hands of monetary policy by allowing it to focus more squarely on domestic cyclical developments this book summarises the results of an OECD project which collected and analysed data from the business sector on their motivations and decision making processes relating to the environment this book provides a comparative study of people's behaviour towards state through mask wearing between European Northern America and Asian countries examining citizens attitudes towards their state during the covid 19 pandemic from the perspectives of history linguistics politics economics and sociology the contributors in this volume explore to what extent people accept the wearing of mask in countries where governments have made it mandatory as compared against countries where people wear masks voluntarily the book thus looks at mask wearing from a political dichotomy between authoritarianism and liberalism and posits the extent to which political divisions could have existed in public opinion over the measures taken against covid 19 filled with invaluable insights through research in 13 countries this book will appeal to readers in policy making and influencing public opinion from the Europe Asia comparative study we present new evidence on how heterogeneity in banks interacts with monetary policy changes to impact bank lending using an exogenous policy measure identified from narratives on fomic intentions and real time economic forecasts we find much greater heterogeneity in US bank lending responses than that found in previous research based on realized federal funds rate changes our findings suggest that studies using realized monetary policy changes confound the monetary policy's effects with those of changes in expected macrofundamentals we also extend Romer and Romer 2004's identification scheme and expand the time and balance sheet coverage of the US banking sample what policy space does a country have for a short term response to a catastrophic event to quantify this space the paper proposes a policy space index the index combines a quantitative albeit relatively limited and narrow fiscal space concept with the indicators of nominal monetary space and reserve space each nominal policy space indicator is then adjusted for individual country's institutional features such as the status of its currency income group access to capital markets debt distress level and the exchange rate regime the final policy space index is derived as a composite of the three nominal policy space indicators each adjusted for five institutional features this index is different from the approach to measure fiscal space at the IMF and requires more work before it can be used operationally the proposed index allows measuring the overall policy space in each country directly in percent of GDP by way of illustration the paper applies the index to the covid 19 crisis fiscal policy is an important instrument for maintaining and improving living standards such living standards can be viewed as an outcome of the interaction between the opportunities offered by society and the readiness and ability of each person to exploit them under certain circumstances public finance can make an important contribution to the creation of opportunities within a given society by raising resources from the private sector through taxation or borrowing domestic and external and allocating those resources effectively and equitably in the form of public spending including through public goods and transfers the first chapters in this volume sketch out a framework that policy makers can use in adopting a more cohesive or integrated approach to the short and long term dimensions of fiscal policy here the traditional threefold rationale for fiscal policy proposed by musgrave stabilization resource allocation and distribution continues to be useful other chapters in this volume take up some of the critical institutional challenges in implementing fiscal policy for longer term growth and development these chapters also look at the tools and approaches being developed to address these challenges improving the quality of public investment management is a particular priority in view of the recent evidence that as little as half of all public investment expenditure translates into productive capital stock the last chapter in this volume is a case study of fiscal responses to the great recession in low income sub saharan africa looking at stabilization and the longer run growth as well as distributional aspects of such responses the growing depth of domestic financial markets in many african countries rather unexpectedly is turning out to be a critical source of financing for fiscal policy responses this book is about national economic policy responses to the great depression of the interwar period taking off from a generally liberal starting point in the 1920s states diverged greatly in their responses some were daring while others remained conservative the two groups further differed among themselves in both degree and kind the book gives a certain shape to this messy reality by identifying broad policy patterns paradigms and offers an explanation of it which emphasizes the ideational disposition of policy actors while recognizing the context that limits what they can do more specifically it argues that the ideas held by rulers and the strategies they consequently developed regarding three major groups of interest business labour and most critically agrarians largely determined economic policy variation across nations
